The authors Khaled Hosseini and Kurt Vonnegut write novels of critical acclaim. Hosseini’s A Thousand Splendid Suns explores the life of Mariam and her struggles with her husband and society, however, she finds reason to fight through a religious tutor. Vonnegut’s Slaughterhouse-Five examines the life of Billy Pilgrim who goes through the bombing of Dresden and is kidnapped by an alien species, the Tralfamadorians, who have him apply a new philosophy.

The most important theme in A Thousand Splendid Suns by Khaled Hosseini is the power of education and the difference education makes for a society. Education is not only a solution to many of the problems in the book, but it is also a way to prevent many of these issues from ever happening again. Education is the factor that divides first and third world societies.
